Dear Mr Speaker

I hereby present the third annual report on the operation of the Freedom of Information Act 1992 as required by section 108 of the Act to be laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly each year.

Queenslanders continue to make this the most popular Freedom of Information legislation in Australia. Queensland agencies subject to the Act have attained one of the highest rates of release of documents of any Australian jurisdiction.

In its first year of operation, Queenslanders recorded the greatest number of applications compared to other states which had introduced FOI legislation. In its third year of operation, overall number of applications decreased due to the success of administrative access schemes established to make access to one's own documents even easier. However, the number of documents to which access was sought increased by almost 25% to 1.28 million documents. Documents released in full at State government level increased to 89.2%, while local government agencies achieved a rate of 91.7%. Conversely, full refusal of access to documents continues to decline - a rate of 5.9% for local government and 7.8% for State government agencies.

Applicants seeking access to documents which concern their own personal affairs from State government agencies continue to constitute the greatest proportion of access applications made, although the success of administrative access schemes has seen the overall proportion decrease from 75.2% in 1994 to its current figure of 63.2%.

I commend this Report to you.

Yours sincerely

1.0 ADMINISTRATION OF THE ACT

1.1 Role of the Human Rights and Administrative Law Division

The Human Rights and Administrative Law Division's (the Division) role as a purely implementation unit has changed since the commencement of Freedom of Information legislation (the Act) in Queensland. Demand for policy development, advice, training, as well as an educative role continues at a high level.

The operational functions of the Division so far as they relate to administrative law legislation, can be categorised under three broad headings namely:

- ▶ administration of freedom of information, judicial review and other administrative law legislation,
- ▶ provision of advice on the above legislation to government agencies and the public, and
- ▶ education of public sector staff in administrative law.

The functions of the Division as proposed originally by EARC were:

- ▶ accountability to Parliament for the administration of the Act (s.108)
- ▶ coordination of training and other preparatory work for the introduction of the Act
- ▶ the provision of assistance to local government on training and other preparatory work
- ▶ monitoring the operation of FOI in government agencies for effectiveness and consistency
- ▶ providing legal advice, including the scrutiny of unmeritorious appeals by agencies
- ▶ ongoing policy development, including future amendments
- ▶ the provision of advice and assistance to FOI applicants
- ▶ community education as to the existence and use of the Act

The initial workload of the Act's implementation was substantial. As reported in the first two Annual Reports, the Division's resources were devoted initially almost exclusively to the implementation of freedom of information legislation.

The Division now performs a number of ongoing functions which are "implementation" type activities. It continues to provide advice and interpretation of the Act to agencies and members of the community as well as to perform its training and educative role.

Since the Act commenced operation the nature and complexity of requests for advice has increased. Over the past two years, as applicants have become more aware of and experienced in the use of the Act, requests for advice from both agencies and the general community have increased, both in terms of volume and their complexity.

In an average month, the Division receives approximately 500 telephone requests for advice and/or assistance. Approximately 48% are from agencies and 52% from the general community.

Agencies contact the Division for assistance in a range of forms, and most frequently require assistance with interpretation of the Act, Information Commissioner decisions, or seek clarification of a policy matter.

1.1.1 Training

Demand for training of new Coordinators and Decision-makers, including Internal Review officers, has grown in the past year after an initial, expected drop once the implementation phase was completed. A high level of expertise in the delivery of training programs has been developed in the Division. Ms Megan Carter was employed by the Division for 18 months during the implementation stages and provided introductory and beginner training courses for Decision-makers, Coordinators, local government, Ministerial staff, Internal Review officers, senior management and general staff. The Senior Project Officer, Alison George, has fulfilled the training role since January 1994 providing similar courses in response to the large turnover in freedom of information officers throughout the State.

In addition, the Division recently developed several specialist FOI courses to assist Decision-makers in the interpretation of some of the more complex issues arising in the exemption provisions. These were developed in response to the recognition that the level of expertise of freedom of information Decision-makers and Coordinators currently spans a greater continuum than when the legislation commenced operation.

Evaluation and feedback sheets on all training courses and sessions provided by the Division over the past 12 months indicate 85% of participants believed the content and structure of the courses to be either "very beneficial" or "extremely beneficial". The remaining participants' evaluations indicate the training courses and programs offered met their needs and were rated as "good".

In the 12 months to 30 June 1995, the Division delivered the services as listed in Table 1 in both Brisbane and 6 regional centres throughout the State.

Table 1: Training

SESSION TYPE	NO OF SESSIONS	AVGE. NO. PARTICIPANTS	TOTAL TRAINED
FOI Information Session	8	40	320
FOI Decisionmaker / Coordinator Course	8	20	160

1.1.2 Community awareness and information sessions

On request, the Division attends various organisations and other interested community groups as part of its educative function. Requests for presentations are received across a wide range of areas, including:

- ▶ participating at conferences,
- ▶ addressing local government conferences around the State
- ▶ speaking to business and community groups,
- ▶ providing guest lectures/tutorials to journalism undergraduate students,
- ▶ providing information to organisations not covered by FOI but who wish to adopt practices and procedures which embrace the spirit of the Act,
- ▶ addressing agency-specific concerns about the impact of FOI to senior executive and general staff, and
- ▶ addressing community organisations and interest groups.

1.1.3 Coordinators' Forums

At the request of Coordinators in State government agencies, forums were discontinued for a period during 1993. Most agencies were struggling with the volume of applications received and the time taken to develop expertise in the legislation. In 1994 Coordinators expressed a need for forums to recommence. The Division recommenced facilitation of Coordinators forums since late 1994. The topics are more specific and complex than those facilitated during the implementation stages. The Division sees this as a natural consequence of agencies settling their freedom of information processes and growth in the need for the provision of more specialised advice and discussion of some of the more complex issues that have arisen out of the operation of the legislation.

The Division conducted 5 forums and coordinated 3 working parties in the six months to 30 June 1995 for both State and local government Coordinators. Issues covered included:

- ▶ 2 year review - issues and submissions
- ▶ address by Deputy Information Commissioner
- ▶ discussion of implications of Information Commissioner decisions
- ▶ fees and charges
- ▶ personal affairs
- ▶ confidential business information
- ▶ sufficiency of search
- ▶ legal professional privilege
- ▶ public interest, and
- ▶ interaction of privacy principles with FOI

1.1.4 Local Government FOI Network

Coordinator's forums are held in central Brisbane primarily for the benefit of State government agencies. Local government Coordinators and Decision-makers are welcome and encouraged to attend Coordinator's forums held in central Brisbane. However, over the past 18 months a number of local governments felt a need to form their own network where the focus of discussions could relate more closely to the issues faced by local government. The "Local Government FOI Network" was established in early 1994. It is attended by up to 15 local government agencies within the region bounded by Gold Coast to the south, Noosa to the north and west to Toowoomba.

Since formation, an officer of the Division has attended all network meetings. In addition to discussion of issues relevant to local government, the Division facilitates workshop sessions on specific exemption provisions and more practical courses on topics such as "Writing FOI Decision-letters". Feedback from the network is both positive and enthusiastic. The Division recognises the difficulties faced by Decision-makers who operate largely in isolation from each other. Formation of the network provides an appropriate forum for local government Decision-makers to enhance their understanding of the legislation, and their capacity to accurately and consistently apply relevant provisions of the Act.

It is proposed to assist other local government agencies establish similar networks across the state.

1.1.5 FOI Policy and Procedures Manual

The original freedom of information policy manual was prepared as two separate versions, one for use by State government agencies and the other for local government. It has remained useful for agencies since commencement of the Act but required a complete review and rewrite in light of recent amendments to the legislation, coordinator feedback, and with the benefit of a number of precedent setting decisions of the Information Commissioner.

The review and rewrite of the Freedom of Information Policy and Procedures Manual has required major changes to the manual's content, format and structure. Due to resource constraints, it is anticipated the revised manual will be completed in early 1996.

The new manual must perform a different role to its predecessor. During the implementation phase of the legislation, all agencies were operating at a similar level of expertise. After more than two years of operation and with the turnover in Coordinators and Decision-makers in many agencies, the manual must attempt to cater for the needs of inexperienced, beginning Coordinators/Decision-makers, as well as those who require more indepth analysis of issues or interpretation of the exemption provisions. Feedback from a number of agencies on the new draft indicates this is being achieved.

1.1.6 Additional services provided to agencies

Information Commissioner Index

The Division has prepared and maintains a cross reference guide to the decisions of the Information Commissioner. The cross reference provides, on a section by section basis, reference to the appropriate paragraphs of relevant decisions to assist agencies interpret the provisions of the Act consistently and comprehensively.

Resource Library

The Division is creating a resource library which will be available for use by Coordinators as soon as copyright issues have been resolved. It includes articles and cases on FOI and related matters. A list of available articles, grouped around particular issues such as "FOI and Privacy", "joint personal affairs" and "confidential business information" etc. will be available on request. In addition, audio tapes are made of Coordinators' forums, copies of which are available to agencies at no charge.

1.2 Two Year Review of the operation of Freedom of Information legislation

At the time of writing, an Interdepartmental Working Group (IWG) has been established to review the operation of freedom of information legislation in Queensland. Although the IWG commenced its review in the 1995/96 financial year, and therefore comment in relation to its findings or otherwise will be the subject of a subsequent Annual Report, its terms of reference are provided here for information purposes.

3.0 FREEDOM OF INFORMATION AND ITS USERS

"The importance of the legislation lies in the principle it espouses, and in its ability to provide information to the public and to Parliament. ... Its potential to make administrators accountable and keep the voters and Parliament informed are well understood by its supporters and enemies."

The Fitzgerald Report

"The degree of public perception of honest Government is, in part, in proportion to the openness of that Government. Information withheld from public scrutiny heightens public criticism and mistrust."

EARC Report on Freedom of Information

In the legislation's third year of operation, statistical information available has enabled a more accurate comparison of usage rates by the community and the identification of a number of emerging trends. Queenslanders continue to take advantage of their rights under the Act and increasingly are availing themselves of administrative access schemes established as a direct result of the Act's introduction.

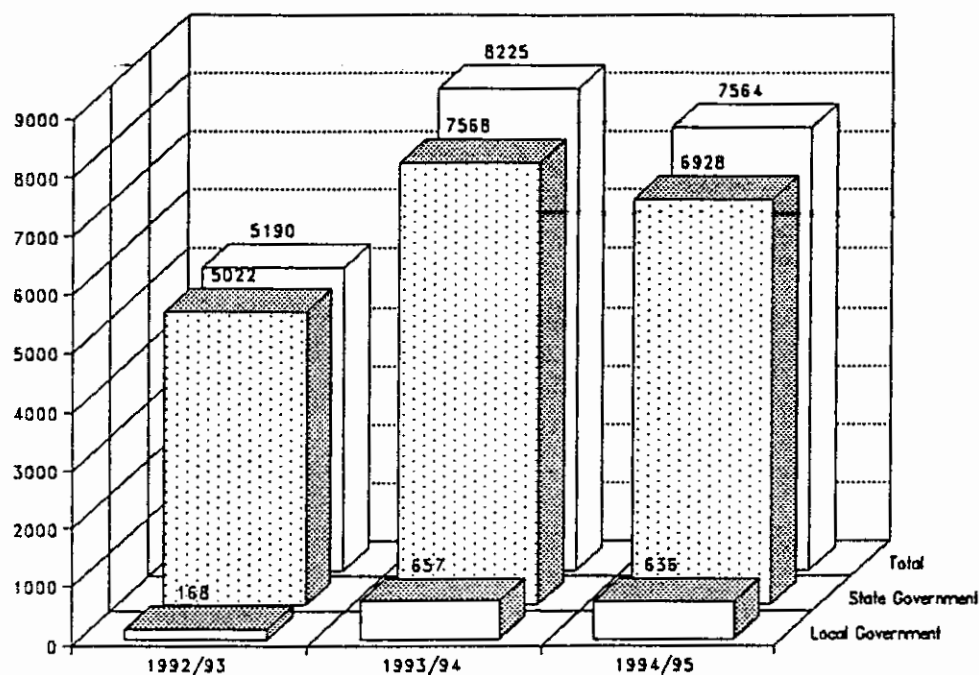

In the 1992/93 financial year, the Act commenced operation among State government agencies on 19 November 1992, and on 19 May 1993 for local government. As acknowledged in previous Annual Reports, statistical information available for State government agencies in the 1992/93 financial year covers only the 7 months from November 1992 to June 1993. In addition, any serious comparison of figures for the operation of freedom of information as it applied to local government agencies between the 1992/3 and 1993/4 financial years was considered indeterminate given that local government agencies were subject to the Act for only 6 weeks of the 1992/93 financial year.

As mentioned in the 1993/94 Annual Report, an analysis of trends in rates of usage among local government agencies will be undertaken in the current Annual Report now that two full years' statistics are available.

3.1 Applications for access

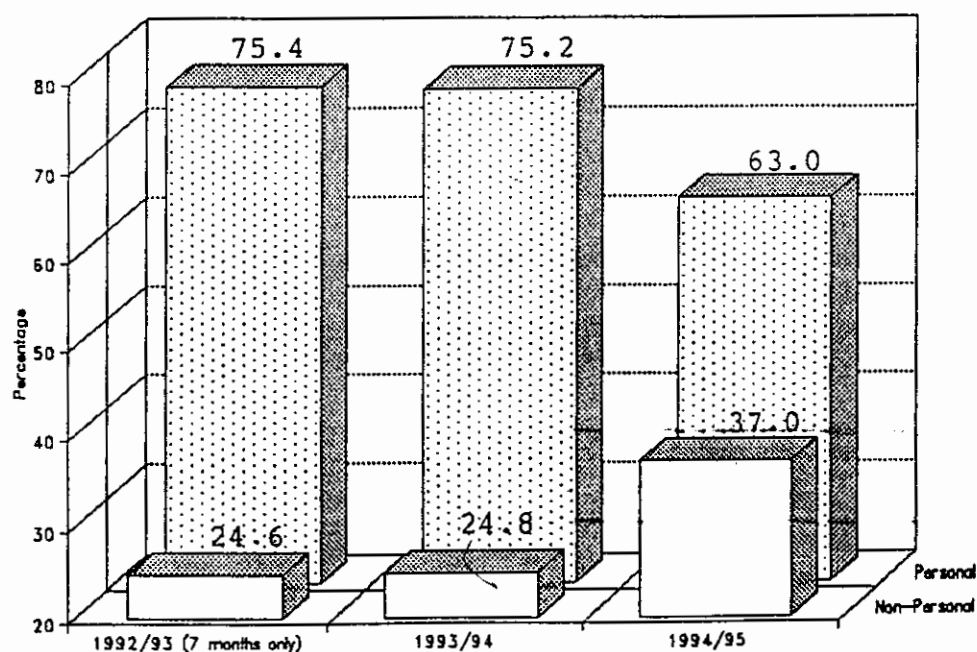

For the 1994/95 financial year 7,564 applications for access to documents were made to agencies subject to the Act, compared with 8,225 for 1993/94 and 5190 for 1992/93. Of all applications for access received by State Government agencies in the 1993/94 financial year, personal affairs type applications fell to 63.0% compared with 75.2% in the previous year.

Table 2: No. of Applications for Access - All Agencies

The decline in the number of access applications made has predominantly been in the area of personal affairs type applications made to State government agencies. The fall is directly attributable to the continued and increasing success of administrative access schemes implemented across a number of agencies to assist members of the community obtain personal affairs and other information concerning themselves outside the Act. Use of Queensland Health's administrative access scheme (implemented during the 1993/4 financial year) more than doubled for the current financial year with over 5,000 administrative access applications made across the State.

Table 3: Type of Application Received - State Government

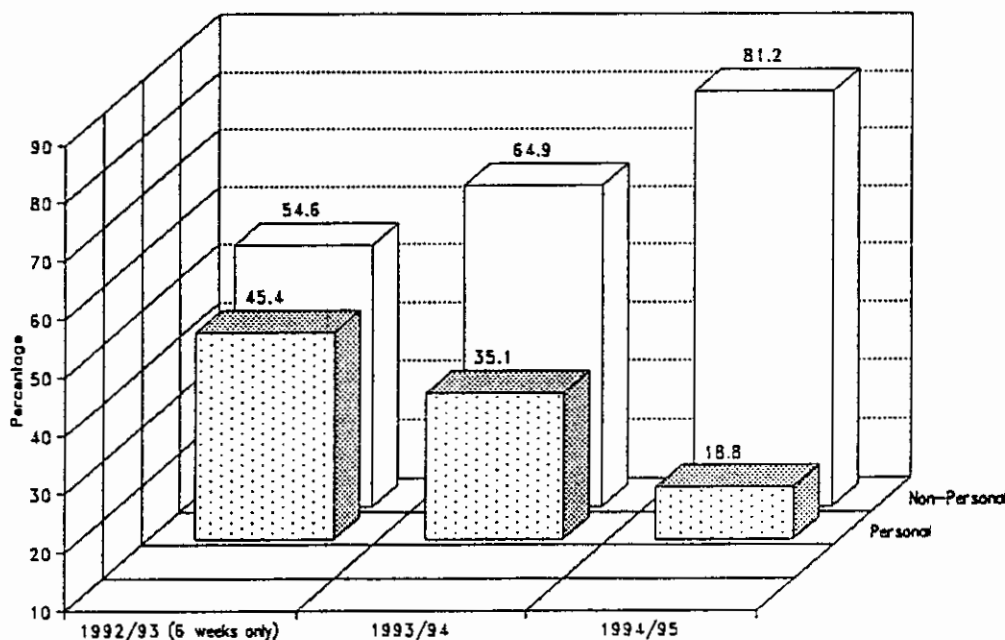

In addition to the comparative speed with which a person can usually be afforded administrative access to their own health records, the cost of providing administrative access has proved significantly less than that if the application was dealt with under the Act. The average cost of providing administrative access to a health record by a Regional Health Authority was $30 in the past financial year, compared to an average cost of $270 for access provided under the Act.

Applications for access received by local government remained steady at 636 for the current financial year compared with 657 in last year's report. It should be noted that some local government agencies failed to provide statistical information to the Department for inclusion in this year's report, despite several extensions of time provided by the Division.

Local government agencies also experienced a decrease in the percentage of personal affairs type applications, down to 18.8% from 35.1% in previous financial year.

Table 4: Type of Application Received - Local Government

3.2 Numbers of documents and access

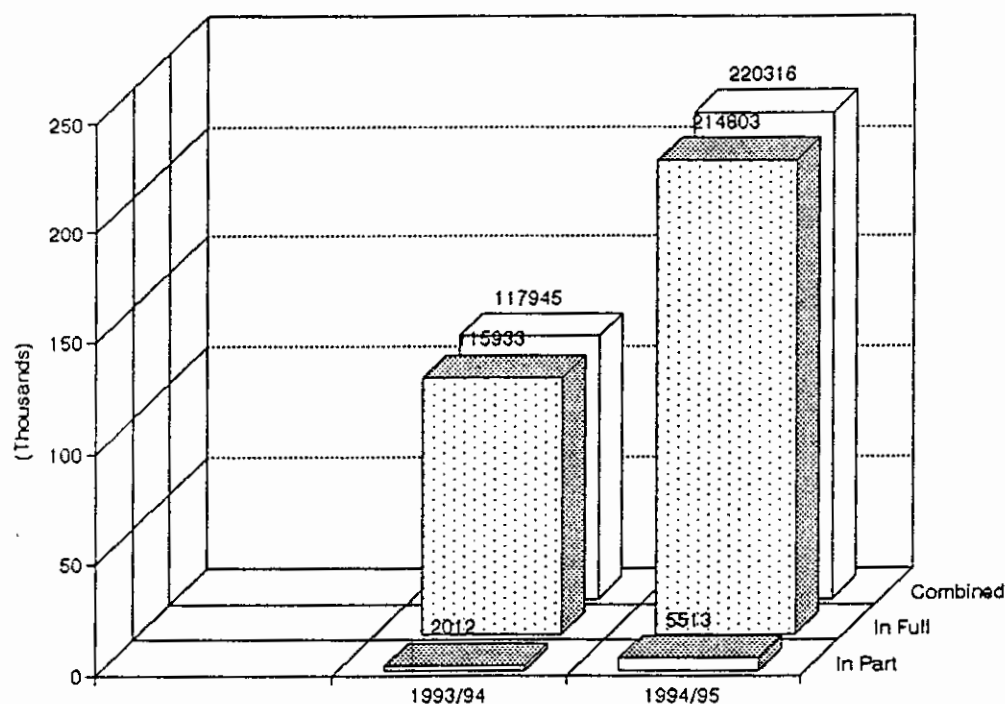

While actual numbers of applications for access fell over the past financial year, the volume of documents dealt with and release rate increased. In the past year, Queenslanders sought access to 1,282,362 documents held by all agencies subject to the Act. Full access was provided to 1,149,240 (89.6%) documents, with partial access provided to a further 37,351 (2.9%). The rate of full refusal of access across the state continues at a low level, 7.8% overall. It should be noted that of the 95,771 documents to which access was refused in full, 3,335 of these were due to the documents being available to the applicant outside freedom of information.

3.2.1 Local government

The most significant change in release rates has occurred among local government agencies. The rate of access to documents provided in full increased from 74.5% to 91.7%, while the rate of refusal of access in full to a document fell from 24.2% to 5.9% for the current reporting period. Table 5 shows a comparison of the actual numbers of documents released in part or in full on the 1993/94 figures with the current reporting period.

Table 5: Documents Released (in part or full) - Local Government

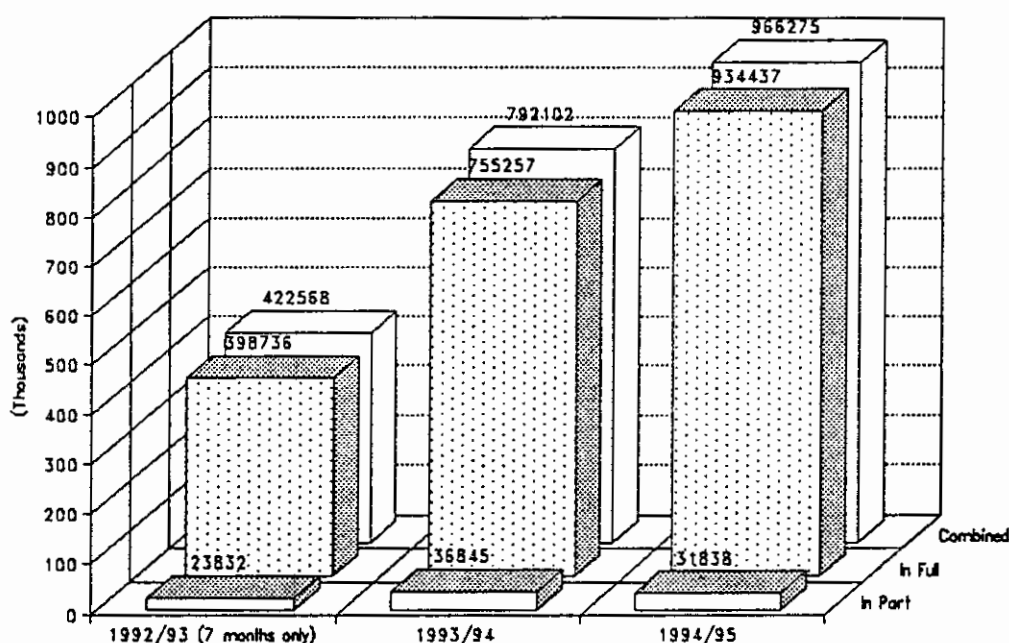

Local government agencies are to be congratulated on the rapid cultural change reflected in their freedom of information statistics. The Division provided training courses in regional areas which could be readily accessed by local government and other regionalised agencies. In addition, local government agencies in the south east corner of the State formed their own local government FOI network. In little more than a year, the growth in knowledge, expertise in and commitment to freedom of information legislation among participating local government agencies has been exceptional. It is evidenced by arguably the best rate of release of documents in any Australian jurisdiction.

3.2.2. State government

Overall, State government agencies' release rate climbed to 92.2% of documents. This translates to 1,048,226 documents, of which 934,437 (89.2%) were released in full to the applicant, with a further 31,838 (3%) released in part. Access was refused to 81,951 (7.8%) of documents.

Table 6: Documents released (in part or full) - State Government

3.3 Number of Applications vs Volume of documents

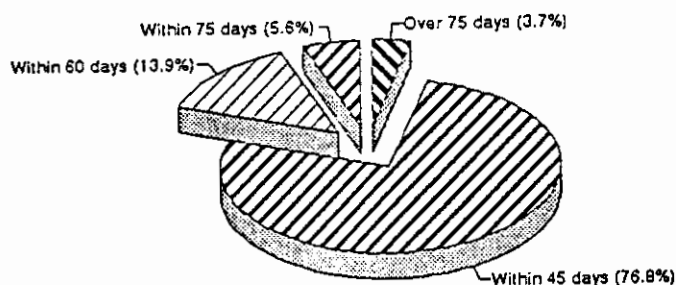

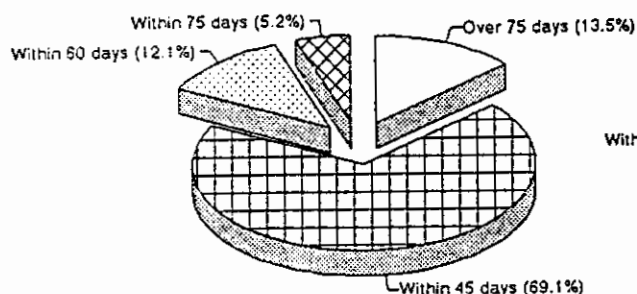

Some agencies receive comparatively fewer applications than others, but may in fact deal with an application involving large numbers of documents. The Department of Primary Industries received 106 non-personal affairs type applications in the 1994/95 financial year, while the Worker's Compensation Board received 1061 personal affairs type applications during the same period. While the latter organisation received 10 times the number of applications, the average number of documents dealt with in a personal affairs type application by the Workers' Compensation Board was 93, compared with an average of 1819 documents for each non personal affairs type application dealt with by the Department of Primary Industries.

3.4 Time periods

The time periods set down in the Act for agencies to respond to applications for access continue to be met in the overwhelming majority of cases. Only 13.5% of applications made to State government agencies take more than 75 days to process. Almost 70% of applications are dealt with in 45 days or less. As in previous years, certain agencies continue to receive a large volume of applications and are unable to meet the time limits prescribed in the Act. There has been considerable improvement in one agency, notably Queensland Police, whose FOI Unit has managed to reduce its overall backlog in spite of receiving an increasing number of applications. Local government agencies, often with fewer FOI resources to deal with access applications, dealt with almost 77% of applications in 45 days or less. Less than 4% of local government's access applications took more than 75 days to process.

Table 7: Response Times

3.5 Fees and charges

No fees or charges apply to applicants who sought access to documents which concerned their personal affairs.

For all other applications, a total of $82,513 was collected, of which $52,842 comprised application fees. The balance of $29,671 was collected as charges, predominantly for photocopies of documents required by applicants. A full breakdown of the fees and charges collected is at Appendixes K and L.

4.0 DECISIONS OF THE INFORMATION COMMISSIONER

The Information Commissioner is the independent external review authority established to investigate and review certain kinds of decision of agencies and Ministers. Appendix N contains a list of all formal decisions made by the Information Commissioner in the 1994/95 financial year. It identifies each decision by number, date, title, relevant sections of the Act and a brief summary of the issue to be resolved.

The majority of applications for review received by the Office of the Information Commissioner are mediated. The following table indicates the range of outcomes for applications for external review received by the Office of the Information Commissioner during the reporting period.

5.0 OPERATION OF THE ACT

Section 108(2) of the Act requires inclusion of details of the difficulties (if any) encountered by agencies during the reporting period in the administration of the Act. It should be noted that many agencies indicated their preference for raising a number of operational issues direct with the Interdepartmental Working Group responsible for the current review of the Act. Accordingly, the majority of comments received in agency submissions related to resource constraints, increased workloads and alternative access arrangements.

A number of other agencies, at local government and State government level, expressed concern at the number of solicitors who are "increasingly using the FOI Act as a form of informal discovery of documents for intending litigants".

The Department of the Premier, Economic and Trade Development noted that "the Department often has difficulty finalising an FOI file because applicants do not make the effort to view the documents to which they were given access." The issue of non-inspection was also raised by a number of other agencies.

5.1 Increased workloads and resource constraints

A number of agencies continued to express concern about the cost of implementing and administering the legislation. The Urban Local Government Association, at its recent conference, carried a motion requesting a review of the relevant provision of the Act "with a view to providing a more reasonable regime of user pays and cost recovery for the resources required ... to process applications and supervise inspections".

The Department of Lands reported an increase of 32% in the number of applications received by that agency for the reporting period, compared to the previous year's figures. The Department of Education reported a 20% increase in the number of applications received which, in addition to the many applications that "were of a highly complex nature", impacted heavily on that agency's FOI resources.

5.2 Administrative access

The success of administrative access schemes continues at a high level, particularly those implemented by Queensland Health and the Workers' Compensation Board. A total of 5,094 applications for administrative access were processed by Regional Health Authorities, compared to 1,574 applications for access under the Act. Many other agencies, including local government, have explored ways and means of providing access to a range of documents outside the FOI process.

Queensland Emergency Services noted that "there appears to have been a decrease in the number of applications ... for access to ambulance records and personnel documents, as there is an increased awareness that administrative procedures are available for the release of such documents".

The Department of Education also noted that "standard administrative access under public service statutory rights seems to be slowly becoming better known to and used by staff (FOI) applicants, but there is a good deal of caution amongst personnel management officers about facilitating standard administrative access to personnel documents".

5.3 Operational difficulties

The overwhelming majority of agencies noted they had not experienced any difficulties with the implementation, continued administration and operation of the Act.

Queensland Treasury believed the time taken for completion of the external review process was of concern. The Information Commissioner has addressed similar concerns in that Officer's most recent Annual Report.

Queensland Police expressed concern with privacy implications when dealing with applications for access to documents concerning "child abuse, sexual offences, domestic violence and family law". That agency also expressed concerns regarding the procedures being pursued by the Information Commissioner when dealing with such applications at external review.

5.4 Notices served under s. 20(1) of the Act

Nil

5.5 Disciplinary action taken as per s. 108(4)(g)

None

5.6 Particulars of facilities available for use by members of the community

All agencies reported having either a dedicated reading room for freedom of information purposes, or the ability to provide an appropriate place for inspection of documents. The majority of agencies also provide copies of policy and procedures manuals and other relevant reading material for inspection by members of the public.

5.7 Other efforts made by agencies

Submissions made by agencies to assist preparation of this report indicate an overall commitment to freedom of information philosophy, policies and procedures. The provision of additional reading materials and information leaflets to assist members of the public demonstrates this, as does a commitment to making a variety of documents available outside the legislation.
